GOLFING FOR CANCER RESEARCH—Tower Cancer Research Foundation's 3rd annual Jack Mishkin Memorial Golf Classic earlier this month at Sherwood Country Club in Thousand Oaks raised more than $260,000 (an increase of more than 20-percent over last year) to fund innovative therapies for cancer. The tournament honors philanthropist, business and community leader Jack Mishkin, an avid golfer, who died in 2014 year from mesothelioma. Jack Mishkin was a longtime member of Beverly Hills-based Tower's board, and his wife Nancy Mishkin is currently Tower Cancer Research Foundation's board chair. The full day of golf included a ball drop where up to 500 numbered golf balls were dropped from a hovering helicopter. More than 100 golfers participated, including Terrance Patrick "Terry" Gannon, a sportscaster for NBC Sports and The Golf Channel. Members of the golf classic committee (from left) included: Richard Koral, Jan Rosen, Dr. Peter Waldstein, Nancy Mishkin, Bob Lakin, Ron Cherney and Brad Shames.
